MALARTSIK-LAC

THE OLD SWIMMIN' - HOLE

by James Whitcomb Riley

*Oh! the old swimmin'-hole! where the crick so still and deep Looked like a baby river that was laying half asleep,
And the gurgle of the water round the drift jest below
Sounded like the laugh of something we onc't ust to know
Before we could remember anything but the eyes
Of the angels lookin' out as we left Paradise;
But the merry days of youth is beyond our control
And it's hard to part forever with the old swimmin'-hole.*

*Oh! the old swimmin' hole! In the long, lazy days
When the humdrum of school made so many run-a-ways,
How plesant was the journey down the old dusty lane,
Where the tracks of our bare feet was all printed so plane
You could tell by the dent of the heel and the sole
There was lots o' fun on hand at the old swimmin' hole.
But the lost joys is past! Let your tears in sorrows roll
Like the rain that ust to dapple up the old swimmin'-hole*

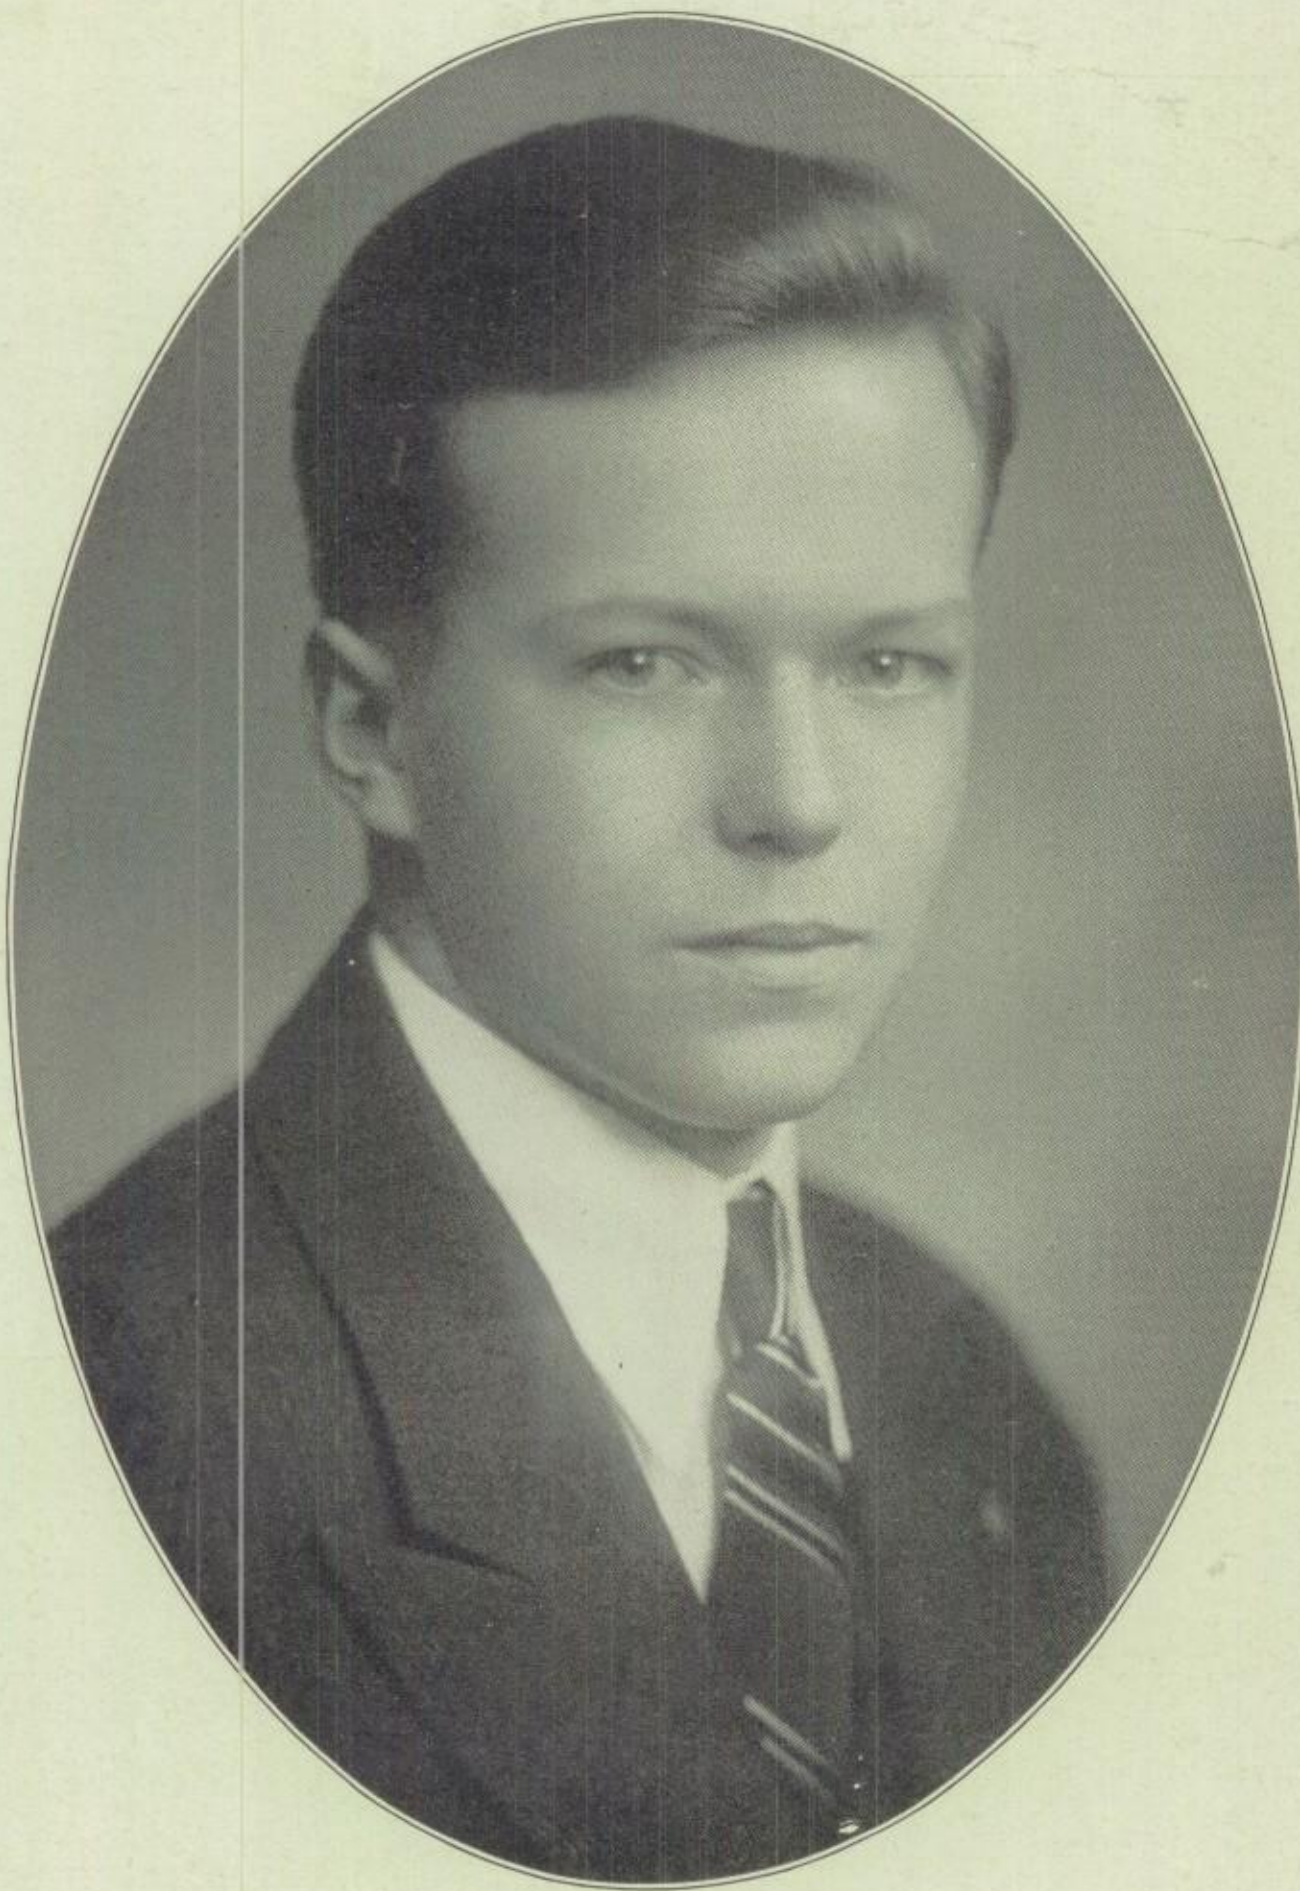

*Blessings on thee, little man.
Take a bath whene'er you can.*

A Senior Complains

I don't wanna work any more. I wanna loaf. I wanna jump on a freight and ride to the open country. Money! I don't want any, I wanna dress like a hobo. I don't wanna shave, dress or look swell.

I don't wanna wake up in the morning out of a nice soft, clean lined bed, and find breakfast waiting for me, I wanna sleep with the flowers in the field; I wanna count the stars as they come out watch them twinkle, and beckon one on: watch the moon man make faces; hear the katydids; watch the fireflies; and listen to all the mysterious noises of the fields; wake up in the morning bathed by the dew, the sunlight, greeted by the birds; look up into the sky. I will wash myself in the famous babbling brook: eat, yes, nature will feed me. I'll walk throw pebbles into the brook, smell the flowers; watch the bird flying through the air, happier than any mortal could be.

Girls, darn 'em, I don't wanna see them for an age. Girls, with their everlasting powder, their stupid and alluring eyes, their short skirts, their gossiping, their nagging, I don't wanna see them any more.

Chicago's Pride - The New Lane

It is with a feeling of deep gratification that everyone connected with the name of Lane through all the years of its existence looks on this representation of the new Lane that will stand for the realization of their hopes and aspirations. It hardly seems that within less than two years all Lane Indians, from the humblest freshman to the most dignified senior, will be reporting for classes in this handsome structure that is far more elaborate in its planning and equipment than many of the leadings in the office months ago."

This building will be a beehive of industry, a great training center for the ambitious boys of Chicago who realize what a future is waiting them in technical lines. Through its spacious corridors will move at every recitation period an army of forward-looking youth, eager, keen-eyed, ambitious to make the very most of the unusual opportunities so freely presented to them.

What a wondrously happy day it will be for the band of loyal Lane Indians when the great doors of the new building are swung wide and and they are bidden enter! How they will scurry down the spacious halls, pausing for a moment to peer in at each class room or shop or laboratory, then to hurry on again for fear they will miss seeing something.

And what will they be saying all the while? "Um, oh looky! See this big room, just for music! And look at these laboratories! Are they the real thing? I'll bet you a cooky Mr. Bogan and Mr. Beebe planned all this! I saw some of the drawings in the office months ago.

The Vagabond Lover

By Frank Mauck

One stormy night nearly eighteen years ago a baby was born in a little home in Iowa. Who knows what Fate had planned for this tiny bit of humanity to accomplish in the long years to come? Hopeful parents prayed that he might become a great success in whatever line of endeavor he might choose. Will that baby, now grown to manhood, disappoint his fond parents? He will not if I can help it, and I should be in a position to help it, for I am that child.

My earliest memories of my life are my residence on a farm. I recall the time when I climbed into a tall tree on the farm and could not get down. I had to stay up there for quite a while, but finally my father came to my rescue.

The first school I attended was the Lincoln in Independence, Iowa. After a year there we moved to Sioux City, where I entered the Irving School. I was in attendance there until I was ready to enter the fifth grade, when we moved to Waterloo. I attended the Emerson School until I was in the seventh grade and then we moved back to Independence. Thus I started and finished my grade work in the same school.

One thing I will never forget is my first so-called romance. When I was in the seventh grade I was very much attracted by a little blonde flapper by the name of Lorraine. We had much in common and were very good friends. But then disaster came into my life. Another boy came along and took her from me. I was broken-hearted for a couple of weeks, but eventually my broken heart mended and I was again my old self.

Then we moved to Chicago. That first summer was full of unhappiness for me. I didn't know anybody and no-one knew me. Chicago at first seemed to me so sordid, so dirty and so unfriendly, but at last I have learned to like it a little better than at first, but I still would rather be out in the wide open spaces.

At last! The great day has come! I am to enter the portals of Lane Tech for the first time. I reach the main entrance on Sedgwick street. What are all those fellows standing around for? Can it be that they, too, are entering Lane Tech? At last a bell rings! We all rush for the entrance. After seeming hours of pushing and shoving I find myself in a room with 40 other fellows. We take a test of some kind and at last are allowed to go home.

My first year was full of surprises, such as going down to the bakeshop and looking for the elevator and such tricks as the high and mighty seniors put me up to. I studied hard that first year. I think, in fact, that I studied too hard, for it seems that when I study a lot the less I know, and, conversely, if I don't study too much I seem to know quite a little. In my second year I didn't study quite so hard and as a result I received a medal for scholarship. In my junior year I began to have a few social engagements and now find myself in my fourth and last year of high school career and about to graduate.

Three months ago I met "her," the girl of my dreams. Nearly every writer grows romantic sooner or later in his stories, so I will try it. We were happy making the rounds of theaters, dances, and dinners. But now disaster has come to mar my happiness. Another has come between us. He is one of my best friends and she is my best girl. What shall I do? Am I to lose her? She seemed so contented when we were together. I do not know where she got the name, but she always called me her "Vagabond Lover." Is that what I'm destined to be? Will I travel from one end of the earth to the other in search of a sweetheart? Ah, if I only were only a poet, to be able to express myself. But I am not so, I must sing my song of love. Isn't that what a vagabond does though? He goes through life just singing and getting his living any way he can. That is just what I'd like to be.

What does the future hold in store in me? That is the question I have often asked myself. I will most likely follow a technical career in radio, wireless or something electrical. I have learned to be a telegraph and wireless operator. I can get a position at the Postal Telegraph any time I wish; so I need not worry about getting a job after I finish school.

I have an ambition to make good at any vocation I may choose. I will work hard and try to get enough money ahead to retire. I will recede to the woods and live a quiet life where there is no one to disturb me. If I feel the need of companionship I can get that easily. I will roam around the country taking romance as it comes, and being in fact as well as in song just "A Vagabond Lover".

P. S. What a glorious feeling! I have just discovered that my beautiful girl friend has not deserted me, but was just trying to make me jealous. Gee, I hope I never have to suffer such agony of soul again. My exquisite red-headed inamorata is more human than ever and no longer a block of ice. Perhaps "The Vagabond Lover" will not be such a vagabond after all.

My Unfinished Story

By William J. Brown

I began life in a little frame house on the west side of Chicago. My ancestors were of that hardy European stock, more given to hard work than to intellectual pursuits. They were industrious, superstitious and very religious. The neighborhood was a thickly settled one, but still it produced its healthy children.

Among the earliest flashes of memory that come to me now are a few unconnected incidents.

There was a little boy who lived in the house next door. Buster was his name; he was my first playmate. In these flashes of memory there are several other little children, dirty faces and long, ill-fitting trousers. The back yard where we played, the little narrow street, the big factory not far away, the store where I went with my father in the evening—all these flash before my mind.

I was about four when I left the old neighborhood where I was born and moved into a more modern home on the Northwest Side. This move brought a better environment and more desirable friends. All my life I have felt a strong desire for loyal and interesting friends. Their influence is one of the most important in our lives. Now I began to associate with friends who had been brought up in better circumstances. At about the age of six life first began to have something of a meaning to me. Even play became more definite, for the haphazard games of babyhood were left behind.

I was six when I started to school and came under its new and all-important influence. The teachers, the classrooms and the large groups of playmates at first seemed strange. It was now indeed that life began to have a new and important meaning to me. I lived in mind with the characters of history and of the storybooks. I began to think about the future. I had a difficult time trying to decide what I was going to be when I grew up. First I felt I would be a policeman; then the roar of the trains made me decide to be a railroad engineer. I ran the whole gauntlet of trades and professions.

Soon I began to meet older friends, not playmates. There was the iceman who often took us for a ride on his wagon. I was shocked at him for the way he could chew an immense hunk of tobacco and swear at the horses at the same time. There was also the teamster who lived next door and didn't chew tobacco, but he could swear even better than the iceman. Not all of my friends, however, either swore or chewed tobacco, and it was their advice that I sought. There was also the painter's son, who was in school studying to be a minister when I first knew him.

As to the teachers, I recall many types. Some of them I liked very much, while others I disliked. Mrs. Chandler, I still remember her name, was my first teacher, and she was like a mother to us all. It was she who allowed me to sleep during class sometimes; she told my mother that the children needed rest. There was also the one who sent me home for playing marbles for keeps and another who sent me to the principal for throwing snowballs.

My last years in grammar school I can now recall with pleasant memories. I began to think and understand more, and to associate the things that I learned in school with what I experienced outside. The awakening that comes with adolescence brought me to a new sense of living, and a new desire to make life a success. I remember the excitement of graduation, and I smile to myself at the satisfaction with which I assured myself that I had finished "my education". I felt that I had learned quite enough and was ready to find a "good job" seemed to be at hand; for many of my friends had found it in the lumber yard, and it remained only for me to make an application and get in on the "big money."

Besides the lumber yard influence there was another, that of a steamfitter who had married

AN OLD SPANISH MISSION

"AFTER THE HIKE"

PIAZZA de SAN MARCCO - VENICE, ITALY.

Tech Prep Picture Contest

Under the able supervision of Mr. G. Paul, the Tech Prep staff with the cooperation of the Daily, sponsored the first photographic contest of its kind in the school. Here every student interested in the art of picture taking, was given the opportunity of exhibiting his ability and being awarded with various cameras donated by the foremost companies dealing in photo supplies. They are the following: Almer Coe and Co., Haloid Co., Eastman Kodak Stores, Central Camera Co., Norman-Willeys Photo Supply, and Bass Camera Co.

From the opening day of the contest, there was a continuous stream of contestants handing in their best results with the camera, and not until the final hour, was there let up in the excitement displayed by the entrees.

As judges of the contest were, Mr. Royal Jurgenson, of the art department, and Mr. H. Gunderson, the staff photographer. Before them was an Augrian task of selecting the pictures which had the right to claim one of the first six places and prizes. The matter of selection was so difficult due to the number of good entrees totaling about 450.

When the elimination was completed the following were the winners.

First Prize—Harry Kotlicky, Falls of the Yellowstone.

Second Prize—Albert Kral, a view of putting up hay on the farm.

Third Prize—J. Maloskie—Three Lane Indians getting dinner on a hike.

Fourth Prize—Aldo Buktenica—Piazza de San Morco, Venice.

Fifth Prize—A. Schlachtmeyer, An old mission in San Antonio, Texas.

Sixth Prize—Conrad Claeson, the Palm Olive Building at night.

Honorable Mentions—Lang, Haenisch, Kudolla, Nimtz, Heinig, Wicks, Horn and Perlet.

The following week, Principal Beebe presented the winners with the prizes before the assembled students in the study hall. This concluded a very successful effort of the Tech Prep which will now become an annual affair.

On cold days if a phonograph is not wound at intervals it will soon run down and stop. This also happens on warm days.

The people of Italy prefer to eat their breakfast in the morning rather than at any time of the day.

Psychologists tell us that it requires almost twice as much wind for a person to play a cornet as it does to play a violin.

Why is a cheerleader? Julius Caesar asked this question just before he was stabbed in the fifth ward. Up to the present moment no answer to this puzzling question has been found, but here it is.

Men are like animals, the others too, they must be led. Who then is better fitted to lead them than a knight of the old, transformed into a wild Willie with white pantaloons and a flaming red sweater? When in one piece, he is almost human, but just behold him on the field of battle, be it football, baseball or a chess tournament. He draws his sword in the form of a megaphone and bellows out a string of incoherent words; then he shakes his fists as imaginary foes and rushes to and fro as if commanding the R. O. T. C. battalion. He then faces the stands and counts the teeth in every open mouth while the howling increases in volume so that there is danger of his being swept off his feet and thrown between the ping-pong players. He prepares for his barking exhibition by consuming innumerable things known under the incognito of hot-dogs.

"Give a YELL! Give a YELL!" squawks the flanneled youth.

"We can't! It's a KOLLITCH!" howl back the hoarse fans.

What Becomes of Our Cheerleaders?

This was the question which Joe Zilch gasped as he choked on a mouthful of spinach. To honor his memory we answer. Some marry loud voiced nymphs, and the world no longer hears from them. Others simply pass away. Then some become banana venders. One former cheerleader retreated to farm life, but his identity was made known when he won the hog calling contest in Missouri.

A Trip Through The New Lane

By William H. Fetz

The weather was still warm, although school was just beginning in September. As I mounted the steps of the new Lane, perspiration dripped freely from my studious brow. Once inside I was simply astounded, Halls 14 feet wide, and stairs almost the same.

I had entered the North Section on the first floor. It contained architectural drawing rooms, the dean's office and a marvelous kitchenette. The principal's office was very elaborate, and I noted with interest that the vocational guidance office was located in a very opportune place.

On the second floor I found scores of class rooms, two instructors' offices, physics lecture room, and several study rooms. As I passed the work room I thought how nice it would be to spend an hour in there.

On the third floor I found more class rooms and a group of mechanical drawing rooms.

The fourth floor had a library and an ante room, music rooms, library and office, and two instruction rooms.

After sight-seeing thus far I was pretty tired, but this was like some of those books you read, it takes you on and on whether you wish to go or not.

In the basement of the center section the sights were even more inspiring. I found a carpenter and machine shop, which extended all over the basement. It was so large I nearly lost myself. I resolved that if I found any more rooms as large as this, I would unwind a ball of thread to follow when I came back.

On the first floor of the center section, I wandered through the auto shop, the lecture room, and chemistry lab. Skipping the class rooms I came to the clinic, an up-to-date surgical room. The composing rooms were very large, and the foundries and a general tool room came next. A heat treating room and a lecture room were combined. Then came the linotype room, the place where the Tech Prep and the Daily receive their insides. The locker office was locked, but the machine shop wasn't so I inspected this marvelous cavern of machinery. The mechanical drawing rooms were nice and light, then came the monotype room and the paper storage room, the plumbing apprentice shop, then most important of all, the Press room. I could vision this room in a few days full of throbbing activity and noise. A large receiving room and a shop laboratory followed. Then I came to the stairs so I climbed them and missed several other rooms.

The second floor had an A. C. electric shop, art rooms, and several other electrical rooms.

Several physics laboratories were grouped together, and next to them was the wood working shop.

On the third floor I found an Art room, class rooms, mechanical drawing rooms, pattern shops, and a large photo work room.

The fourth floor contained an Architectural drawing room, biology labs, an editorial class room, and several laboratories.

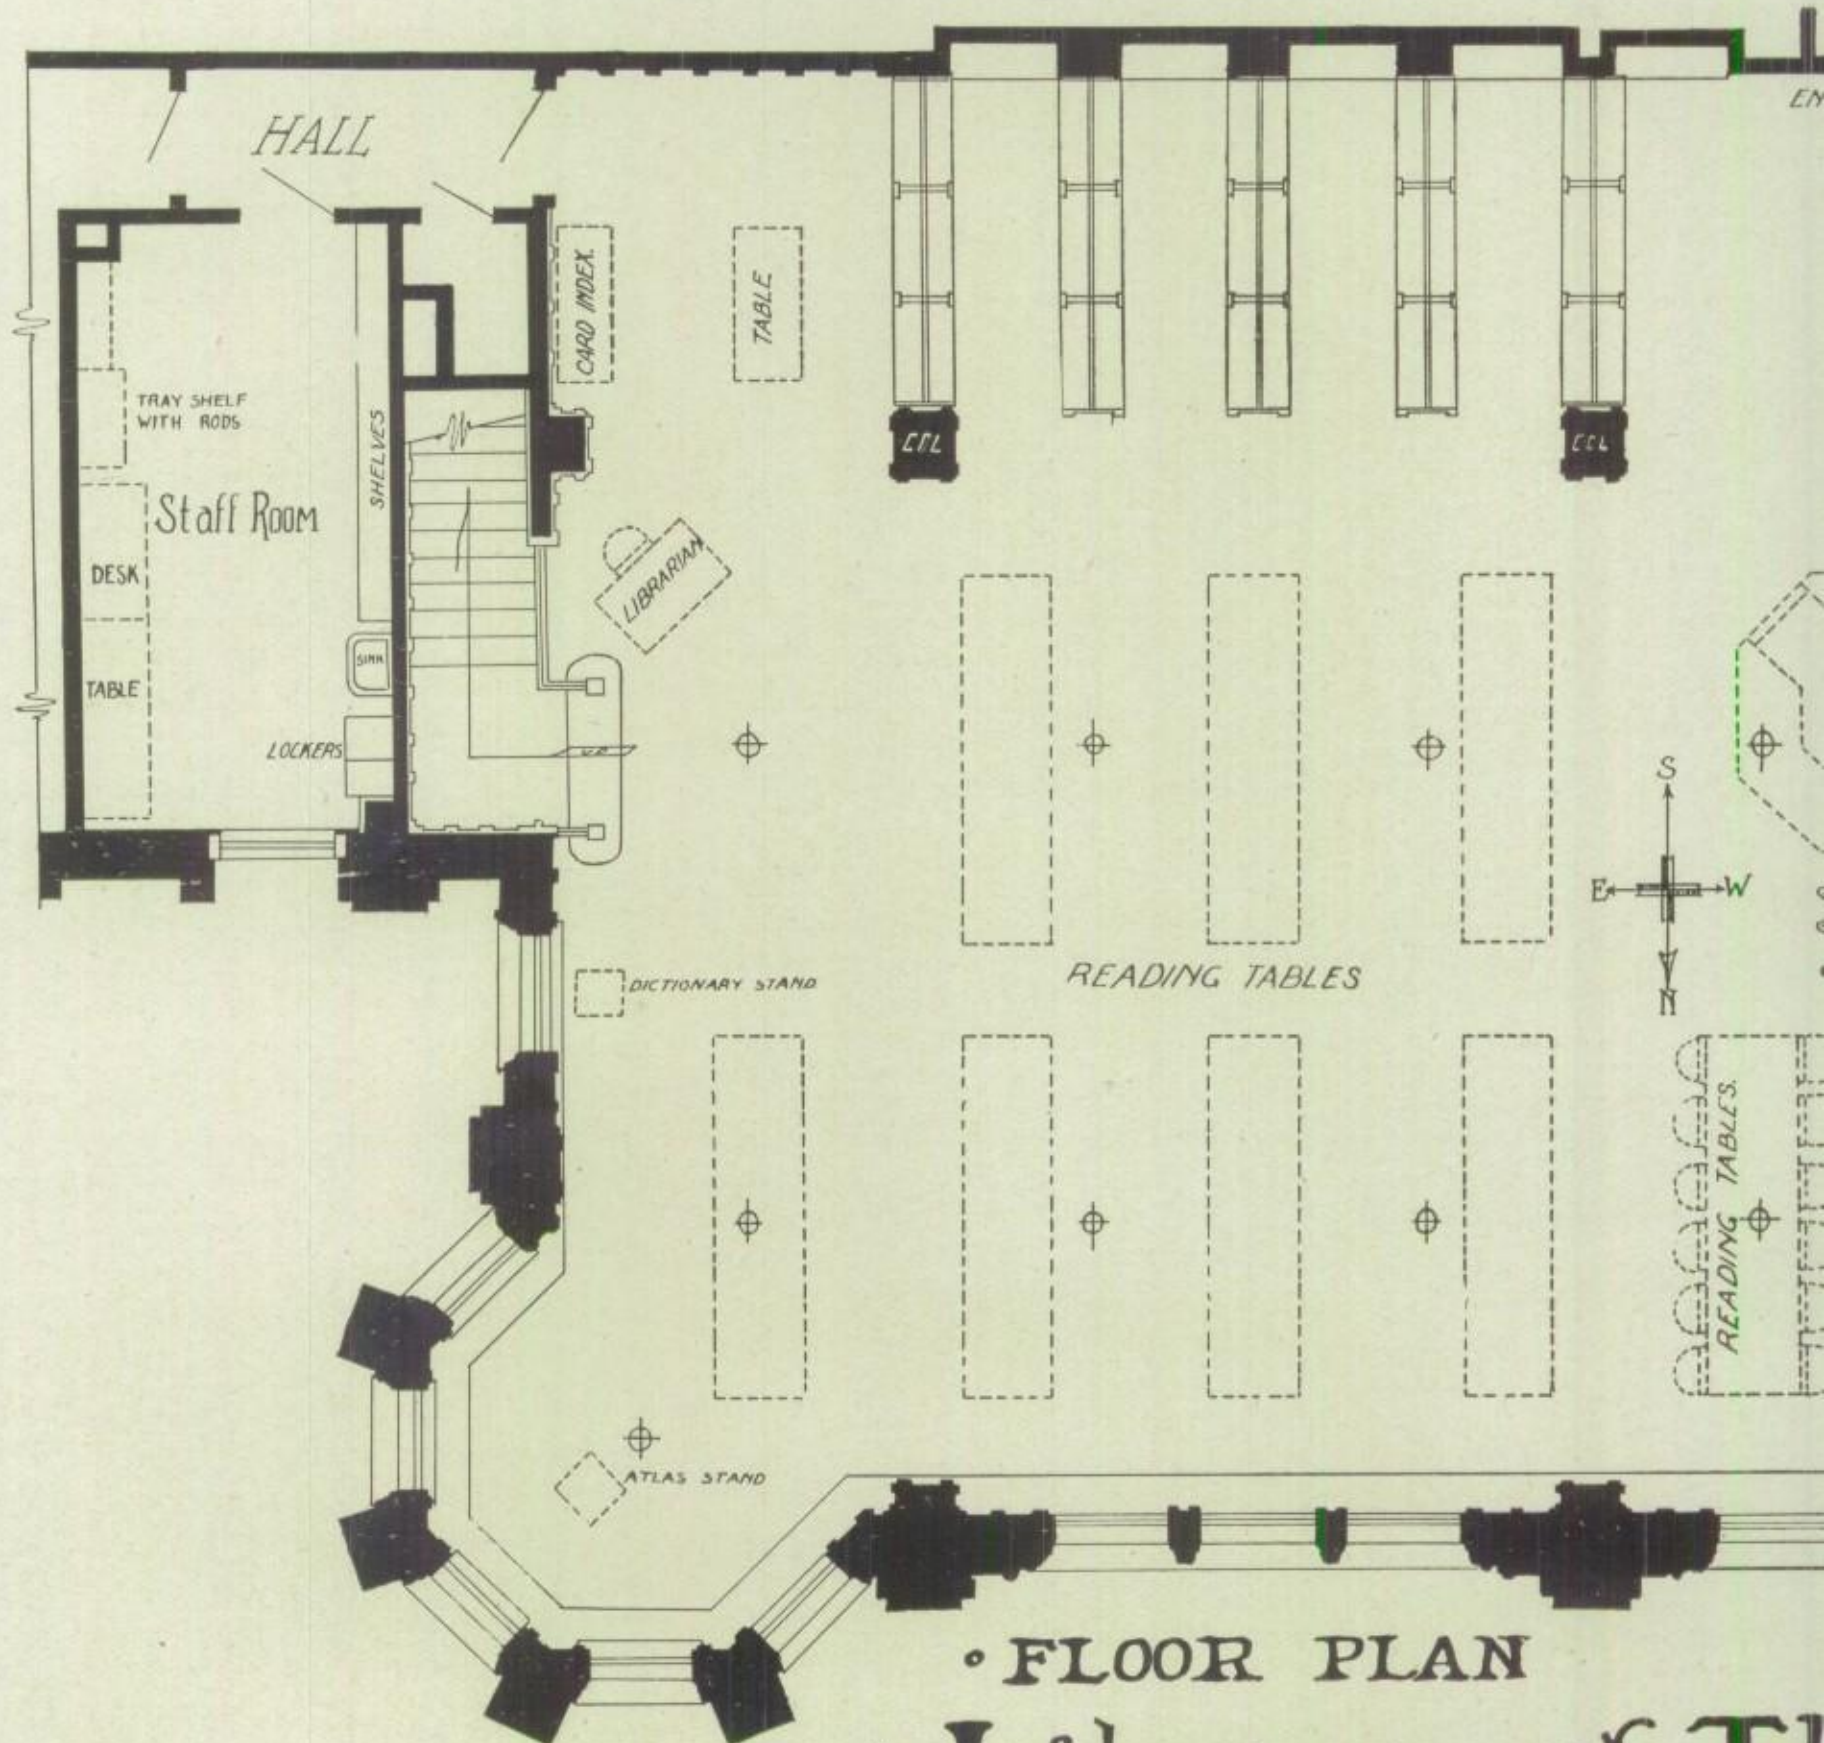

The south section contains two large gyms, architectural drawing rooms, mechanical drawing rooms, electric shops, science rooms, wood working shop, a library, and sign painter's shop, ending with a large typewriting room.

The new building contains three large gyms. One, the main gym, has a balcony large enough to accommodate a large crowd. I found that the auditorium is four stories high and is equipped with fire-proof curtains, a large stage and a marvelous lighting system. The chandelier is not the swinging kind so there is no danger of a repetition of the Phantom of the Opera. The swimming room is regulation size, of white tile, and has flood lights. The locker room which is next to the pool is nearly three times the size of the pool and contains more lockers than I could count in ten minutes.

By this time I had become wearied and sat down on a convenient window seat. As I looked out on the spacious grounds I was more than delighted to see the green turf of the football field marked out with the straight lines of white. Off to my right was a baseball diamond such as would have thrilled the heart of Coach Moore in the old days at Lane when our baseball boys made a wild scramble for one of the diamonds at Lincoln Park. Quite a difference, I said to myself.

Along the bank of the river I could see the modern stadium provided for outdoor sports. It bordered upon an athletic field that was provided with a cinder track for Lane's future speed demons. Certainly here were unrivaled facilities for training of Lane boys in all branches of athletics. It was a matter of deep gratification to me that at last, after many years of waiting and hoping, the dreams of many a loyal Lane Indian had found realization in this most substantial form making a most remarkable center to train the young men of Chicago.

Now would you believe it when I looked at my watch it was exactly 2:30, time to go home.

The Tech Prep is more than delighted to present herewith an accurate reproduction of the architects plan for the Library room in the new Lane Tech building that is to rise at Western and Addison. This is a feature that all Lane students joyfully welcome. The large scale on which it has been planned afford ample space for the many student activities that will center in this room.

Nearly 200 boys can work in the room at the same time. It will be noted that to the right is shown the reflected ceiling plan while to can be seen a part of the floor plan. All des have been provided for, such as magazine atlas stands.

Adjoining the main room, which will be as ge as our present Study Hall, are smaller rooms that will serve for the library staff. It is planned to equip this library with hundreds of volumes covering the fields of electricity, aviation, chemistry, biology, literature, history and many technical branches. All in all, it will be one of the most modern libraries in any American high school.

In the Mirror of the Past

By Harry Larson

On January 21, 1911, in an isolated farmhouse in Sweden, a descendant of the Vikings first tried his hand at life. His eyes opened on a scene of majesty and grandeur: the world bedded down in a pure blanket of snow, broken only by distant forests of pine and birch stretching away as far as the eye could reach. His first two years of life were spent in these idyllic surroundings.

His forbears had been tillers of the soil, but his parents decided to migrate to America, "the land of opportunity." After the usual confusion of Ellis Island, they decided to settle in Chicago. Here his father undertook to train himself to be a stationary engineer, in which ambition he succeeded.

Up to the present time the lad's health has been good save for a disaster that overtook him at the age of four years, when he contracted infantile paralysis. This disease, which at that time was not under control as it now is, left him with his right leg lamed up to the thigh.

He has not, however, allowed this handicap to get the best of him, for in his childhood he was active in many of the outdoor sports, and later he has developed into a fairly good distance swimmer, having taken part in several meets. His other hobbies include reading, philately and sketching.

One incident of his boyhood stands out clearly. After a visit to the Field Museum one cold winter day, accompanied by two friends he went down to play on the lake ice. Stepping out on what appeared to be an extension of the sea wall, but which turned out to be an overhang of ice, he was precipitated into the icy waters. Through his knowledge of swimming, however, he came through this experience unscathed save for a few scratches.

His eight years of grammar school were spent in a number of schools, ending in graduation from the Chase School. His moral and religious growth has been that of the average boy, the result being that he is neither a paragon nor a hoodlum. He was led to Lane partly by the influence of friends but primarily because of its excellent reputation for preparatory engineering courses.

His career in the high school has been fairly successful. While in 1B his ambition was fired by the sight of a senior strutting about the corridors, wearing a scholarship fob. From then on he went to work in earnest, and now at the close of his high school life, he is the proud possessor of a fob like the one which spurred him on to his strenuous scholastic endeavors in his freshman year. He also enjoys the added honor of being secretary of the National Honor Society, and he is deeply thankful to the friends who have enabled him to possess the honor of being secretary of his 4B and 4A classes, not so much for the honor as for that priceless possession—friends. His only regret when looking back on his high school career is that he did not become interested in public speaking sooner. Through the influence and encouragement of Miss Rafferty, public speaking and debating have become one of his major interests in school life. He considers his four years at Lane as the happiest of his life, and such ambitions and ideals as he may possess received their impetus there.

One of his ambitions since boyhood has been to be a successful engineer. But his most cherished ambition is to do something for mankind, to leave some lasting impression on the sands of time, and toward this end he will strive with all the powers that are granted him.

It was 14 minutes to seven by the Portage Park Bank clock when we looked around at each other and saw that there were five of us, divided into two sections. The first section was composed of "Drez" Dremal, "Trizy" Trzyna, "Dy" Dylewski and "Sleepy" Rousseau, Lane's fencing team. The second section was "Jake" Jacobson, our licensed chauffeur. We piled into Jake's shiny vehicle and as it roared up road 83 we said to each other, "We're off for St. John's Military Academy, Delafield, Wisconsin, Inc."

The day was perfect. The sun was in the splendor which is present with its rising. The empty highways made it possible for a continuous high speed except through the towns where officials lurk in the shadows. On both sides we were engulfed by rolling green fields, with farmsteads at intervals, surrounded by the customary cows and chickens, mainly in the road, and several porkers rooting in the cool, black mud.

We passed through the Fox Lake district where several gentlemen who pay their income tax from very questionable sources, were extinguished by machine gun bullets. Two hours later we reached the gravel road that was to lead us to Coach Kahle's summer home. All peered through the thick white dust for the aforesaid landmark. As we skidded around a sharp curve, there it was, nailed to a tree "Lake Reese. Don't Kill a Child."

We were in the back yard stretching our stiffened limbs when Mr. Kahle stepped out to greet us, but we beat him to it and yelled, "Where are the fresh egg sandwiches?"

Back into the cottage rushed the Coach and emerged with Mrs. Kahle for protection. Soon our ravenous appetites were satisfied and then for a boat trip around the lake. We rowed in a haphazard fashion for quite a while, then off on the last leg of the trip.

It wasn't long before we took off our right road, for our Coach found it hard to follow the directions given by the land tillers. On reaching Burlington, Mr. Kahle took it upon himself to inquire for the right direction. From among the town's entire populace he made his selection, a pretty Miss in a Model "T" Ford. She guided us to the right crossing. Meanwhile Jake headed off the Coach's bus, giving Trizy a chance to yell, "Your tie is wrinkled, Mr. Kahle!" We all cast sheep's eyes at the maiden as she buzzed away.

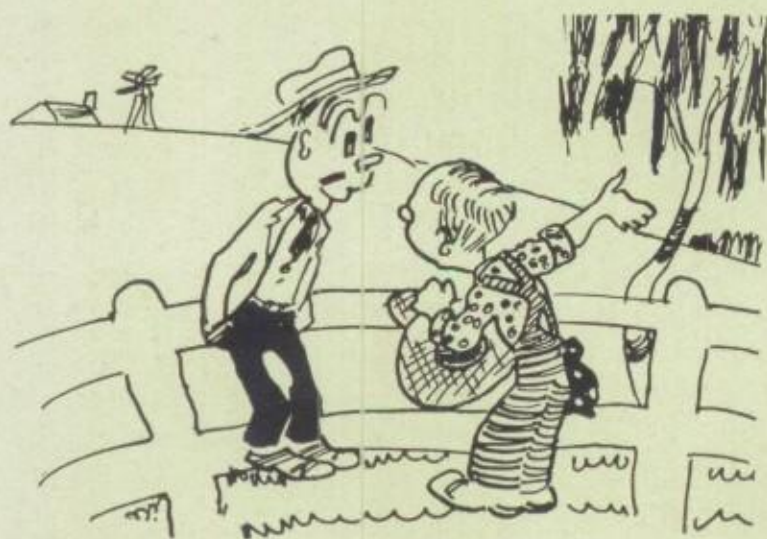

Delafield is a small town of about one thousand inhabitants, with the academy in the northern part. We encircled Delafield several times before we found the road leading directly to the campus. On reaching the gymnasium we learned that in an hour lunch would be served, this being welcome news.

It is said that an army travels on its stomach, but through experience we found that this mode of traveling has its drawbacks, so all second helpings had to be refused while we watched Jake make mashed potatoes and gravy disappear. Once again in the open air Sleepy astonished all by extracting two slices of boiled beef from his hip pocket and slipping them over his tonsils.

We appeared on the floor of the gym attired in white together with opponents from Senn, Crane, Morton, Country Day and St. John.

Trizy, our City Champ, came through without a loss, while the others more or less successful. Sleepy's after-meal brought no good, for up to this time four losses were marked against him and one more to go, the score being: Senn 14, Lane 13, Crane 12, St. John 9 and Morton 8. All the schools exhausted their bouts except Crane and Lane, which Sleepy was to have with Crane's second best man. Evidently the boiled beef had settled, for he fought with uncanny cleverness. Swiftly advancing, he pressed his man throughout the bout, nosing him out with a 5 to 4 win, putting us on the level with Senn and first place.

Since only one trophy was available, and the title of Mid-West Fencing Championship was to be shared by two schools, the Major in charge tossed a coin to decide who would take the present cup and wait for the other to be sent later. Drez, having no experience in this line of business, was deeply in thought, and about to take a vote from the entire team as to what was the Coach found it hard to follow directions right thing to call, when Senn's Captain called "Heads" and won.

Nevertheless our trip proved to be a success as the initial intentions were fulfilled even though we have to share the title.

We refused the invitation to stay for supper, for the sooner we were on our way the sooner home we would arrive. We dined at a highway eating place, and finished the trip uneventfully, as good trips should be concluded, with Coach Kahle, departing for his cottage on the lake, to spend the Sunday which was to come.

Lane loses a valuable man through graduation. Harry Balkin, Lane's news correspondent, has done much to put Lane's name and activities into the city newspapers with which he is connected. This work was appreciated by all students of Lane. Good work, Harry.

The eyes of the school are directed towards the City Baseball Championship, an elusive goal that lures us on. Lane has performed well at bat and in the field during the North Section race. We feel that our team will be found up near the top.

The annual exhibit on June 18 attracted hundreds of interested visitors. The exhibition was composed of exhibits of shop work by different shop classes and drawing classes. All the technical departments were in operation, presenting an interesting view of Lane's varied activities.

The Tennis team is hoping to repeat its victory in the City meet this year. If they win, it will be their third consecutive Tennis title, as they won two championships in previous years.

"Now the school will go to the dogs," thinks the graduating Senior as he struts out of the door with his diploma in his manly grasp.

Since the mainstays of the Tech Prep Staff have been graduated the newcomers will now have a chance to show their ability in the world of Sherlock Holmes and Frank Merriwell.

Lane's Baseball team, up till the memorable day of June 11, 1930, had not defeated Lindblom for many moons, but on that day Coach Moore and his wild Indians pounded out with their war clubs an overwhelming victory, and the Red and Gold walked home.

With work on the new Lane now well under way, the graduating Senior wishes he had not started his high school education until later so as to roam through the spacious corridors of the marvel building.

Bill MacArthur captained the Lightweight Basketball team to the North Section championship and narrowly missed the City Title. His "never die" spirit turned the tide of many a game from defeat to victory. Mac graduates this year and will be missed by the lightweight squad.

Zbyszko Trzyna, City Individual Fencing Champ and third in the State, is regarded by all as the only nonchalant fencer in the league.

Following the footsteps of his brother Willard, Al Shuflitowski has every reason to be threatening the City individual title in tennis.

Although the football team didn't reach the finals, they displayed championship caliber in all their games. The team elected Henry Jargstorf, the veteran tackle, to the captaincy as a reward for the manner in which he tackled opponents.

DeWayne Muessel was regarded as the outstanding performer on the Gymnastic Team. The team based their victory in the City meet on the high point average which DeWayne would receive, but unfortunately he was seriously injured in practice, suffering a broken chest bone, thus being unable to compete for the City title.

This was one of the big seasons for Micky Valentine. He won the National 100-yd. free style and later the national 40-yd. title. At the Cook County meet, Micky won the 50 and 100 yard events. He still has a season before him in which he will add still more titles to the one he has captured up to this time.

Bob Anners, captain of the Baseball Team, plays second base to such a degree of perfection that he is a sure candidate for the al-City team.

John Hosanna, captain of the Wrestlers, annexed the 145-pound title in the Cook County Consolation meet. In the City meet Johnnie won three and lost one bout for second place in the 155-pound match.

Carl Vaicek excels in two sports, baseball and basketball. He was chosen All City center and is also regarded as an outstanding pitcher. Lane depends on his arm to hurl us to victories. Carl also captained the Heavyweight basketball team.

Hymen Cohen was a member of the 1929 Outdoor Championship Relay team and in the next year was elected Captain. His track activity was cut short by graduation. That's what learning does to an athlete.

Shaping My Future

By Arthur J. Adrean

The family assembled in the living room after the supper dishes had been put away. The young lad was at one side of the room. His attention was centered on the sketch he was making. His grandfather, tall and advanced in years, sat in the large rocker peacefully, his eyes fixed on the lad. Finally he broke the silence between them by telling some incidents of his own life.

"In the summer my father would send me out to milk the cows or clear the vegetable beds of weeds. Everything was done by hand. My father had planned to have me be a farmer. Each spring I had to gather my belongings and take the cows up on a high plain, a foothill of the Alps. There, far from home he would faithfully guard the cows.

"It is now close to thirty years that I have been in America. I have not yet owned a farm. I have worked myself up from a young farmer in Europe, to a tyle-floor layer, to a supervisor in this country. I am about to retire from the building line and here I find a boy taking it up. He will probably carry on from where I left off, in the years to come."

The young lad lifted his head and looked at his grandfather with an astounded look on his face. His father then asked "Is this true, son?" The lad gave a little laugh and nodded.

"Well," said his father, "we shall see. We are doing our best to give him all the schooling he wants. The schooling will make his future life easier."

The lad remained in the same position, nervously folding a piece of paper. He was a good natured lad, industrious in his studies. He had only a few recreation interests, baseball being the greatest. In his leisure moments he would close the door of his room and there, alone, he would quietly solve or make puzzles. He also loved to sketch people, household articles and other subjects.

He was much interested in the first school diploma he was to receive in a few weeks. To him it meant all the world. Graduation day was to him the most thrilling of all days.

"Arthur," said his mother, "have you decided what you want to take up and where you are going to go. You know that you shall have to decide before school takes up next September."

"Yes, mother, I've decided to go to Lane. What course would you suggest for me to take?"

"Well, accounting is good. So is engineering for a boy like you. Architecture—"

"That's it, mother. I have had that on my mind and wanted to mention it to you first. I have been told it is a remarkable profession."

Time slips on apace now, and the lad is about to complete his four-year architectural course. "It is eleven o'clock and our boy has not laid aside his work yet."

Quietly the mother and father stole up to the lad's room and peered in at their boy. There he was thoughtfully sitting at a small desk which was covered with papers, drawings, books and pencils. His left arm upraised supported his tired head, which was bent very low over his work, and his right hand worked very rapidly at intervals.

"Yes. The boy has taken it all seriously. He loves his work and the course of study chosen. We shall try our best to pull him through and to give him all the schooling he wants so that he may advance in his profession and may have the satisfaction of seeing his designs actually erected. All of them shall be a memorial of our service to him and his co-operation."

LANE TECHNICAL HIGH SCHOOL

Lane is where our dreams begin,
And dreams that do come true.
No other school so great Everywhere Lane is known.

Tested has its metal been.
Each time to stand supreme
Chicago is its home.
Home of all good things
No other school, no other city can compare.
It has always led.
Conquest of study are not in vain.
All students are true blue.
Lane, the foundation of the country.

High are its morals
If is never a word at Lane.
Go and do is our motto,
His and mine.

School of schools.
Can it always lead?
However it may fare, may it always be,
Our school, above all.
Our school we pledge to support.
Lane, the school of ideals.

A Page of Pesky Pelicans

By Marshall Brucer

By this time, if your eyes are hitting on all six cylinders, you have noted that disgracefully wasted page of insignificant figures running thither and thither over the opposite page. It shows the first practice game of the team that won Lane's first baseball championship back in the late '90's.

On the pitcher's mound we have Chas. Root Charley has a big grin on his map because he has pitched a no-hit game of ping-pong. Joe Mc Carthy is warming up that big Irish triple threat man, Pat Macchen, while Dick Merriwell is practicing his famous question mark ball.

It will be noted that Principal Beebe, who usually plays behind the big stick, is practicing sliding in the out field between Big Bill Thompson and Helen Wills.

Babe Ruth is at the plate, preparing to sock a triple. Babe wasn't the King of Swat in those days. He was the Queen of Triples. He and big Moose, the old 1,000 per-center, used to take instructions from Professor Strass. Mr. Strass achieved his position in the baseball world by taking Aimee Semple McPherson's ten-day Correspondence Course.

Holding down first base is Grimm, assisted by Nick Altrock. Nick, as you see, is showing off before Madame Gally Currchy. Gally, by the way, got her start selling pop to third basemen. Ask Les Bell how he used to watch her when the third base umpire, Cap. Kidd, wasn't looking. On second base you see Red Grange and Bobby Jones starting a fight, but Frank Merriwell is coming to the rescue, so never fear. The ump on second is Herbert Hoover, who later became a great fisherman.

Hack Wilson is the short stop. He is playing in the wrong place however. He should be helping Art, the great catch Cuyler who is as usual running off with the bases. Don't worry about the bases, though, because as soon as Nick Carter's brother, Mick finds the lost ball he'll take care of Kiki.

The future umpires had better watch out because Colonel Pearsall and Will Rogers are practicing hard to exterminate them. The Cheering Section consisting of Tommy Edison, Hank Ford and John D. are not so bad at tossing pop bottles and little wonder, for they have been coached under the expert instruction of the Honorable Percy Solomon Moore, B.V.D., F.O. B., C.O.D.

Character Reading

By Al Kosloff

If you guys want to know what this character reading is all about, I'll let you in on a secret. Now I'm not saying that I can guess everybody's name, but I can tell a fellow what the shape of his head represents. For instance: People are divided into five classes. They are vitals, thoracics, muscular, osseous, and mental types. The first type, or vitals, are usually fat guys who weigh a couple of pounds less than an elephant and whose heads are round. This type of a person likes to eat like a horse and usually sleeps plenty. The vitals make good politicians and bosses because politicians don't have to work hard. The trouble with vitals is that they are usually dumb. And how! If you want to make a hit with a vital you must buy him lots of eats and make him laugh a lot. Then the guy'll do anything for you.

The next type is the thoracic. No, it isn't what you're thinking about. Thoracic is a nut who likes to entertain people. He's the guy that keeps you awake all night with his singing. He's the bimbo that's here today and gone tomorrow.

Most of the actors are thoracics. Now this type isn't supposed to have so much brains either. Their heads are kite shaped. You know, the nose sticks out, the jaw shaped like the tail of a kite, and the forehead like a Mack Truck. This type of a guy is supposed to have much charm. He's the kind the girls are always nuts about but the hardest to keep. His motto is when in Sardinia act like a sardine. I don't think you're this type.

The third type is the muscular. This kind of a person is about as graceful as an elephant. The shape of the head in this party is square. I think it's a block head. The athletic guys are usually of this type. One thing about the muscular type; he does all the dirty work. The next time you go outside see who cleans the street, who drives the trucks, who fights for dough, and if it isn't the muscular type I'll eat my hat. This type is the husky type and has the strength of an ox. Mabe you might be this type. I don't know.

LANE DEFEATS SCHURZ FOR THE SECOND TIME

Schurz suffered its second defeat from the Lane nine this season at the Logan Square Ball Park. The game was one of the closest ones played in the North Section race, the final score being 2 to 1 in favor of Lane.

Lane scored the first run of the game when Baumgardner received a base on balls and stole second. Vaicek sacrificed, advancing Baumgardner to third. Strobel singled scoring Baumgardner.

Schurz scored the single tally in the forth tying the score, but Lane came back in their half and broke the tie, when Vaicek, who was playing center field, hit a homer into deep right after two were down.

Masek's twirling held down the menacing bats of the Schurz outfit by striking out seven men, and the one run lead won the game.

LAKE VIEW DROPS ANOTHER TO LANE

The Red and White boys from Lake View fell before the strong Lane team at Logan Square by the score of 2 to 0. Carl Vaicek twirled for Lane and blanked the wildcats and made their title hopes go blue. Lake View had hopes of beating Lane and tying for the section lead, but at the end of the seven innings they went home with a turned up lip because our boys spanked the day-lights out of them. This was the second defeat that Lake View took from the Myrtle and Gold nine and settled the question of supremacy in the north section.

ROOSEVELT LOSES TO LANE, 7 TO 3

To revenge the basketball defeat that put Lane out of the running, Carl Vaicek breezed the ball past the Roosevelt outfit to help Lane their third league game of the current season. The stubborn outfit from the Wilson and Kimbal district seemed to like Carl's pitching and laced hits right and left until Carl was forced to give way to Masek who did a great job in the relief role. Right there and then the tide changed and the Indians stepped out in front to assure the fans that Moore's outfit is a chief contender for the title. The game ended with Lane at the long end of a 7 to 3 score.

LANE BEATS WALLER FOR EIGHTH STRAIGHT WIN

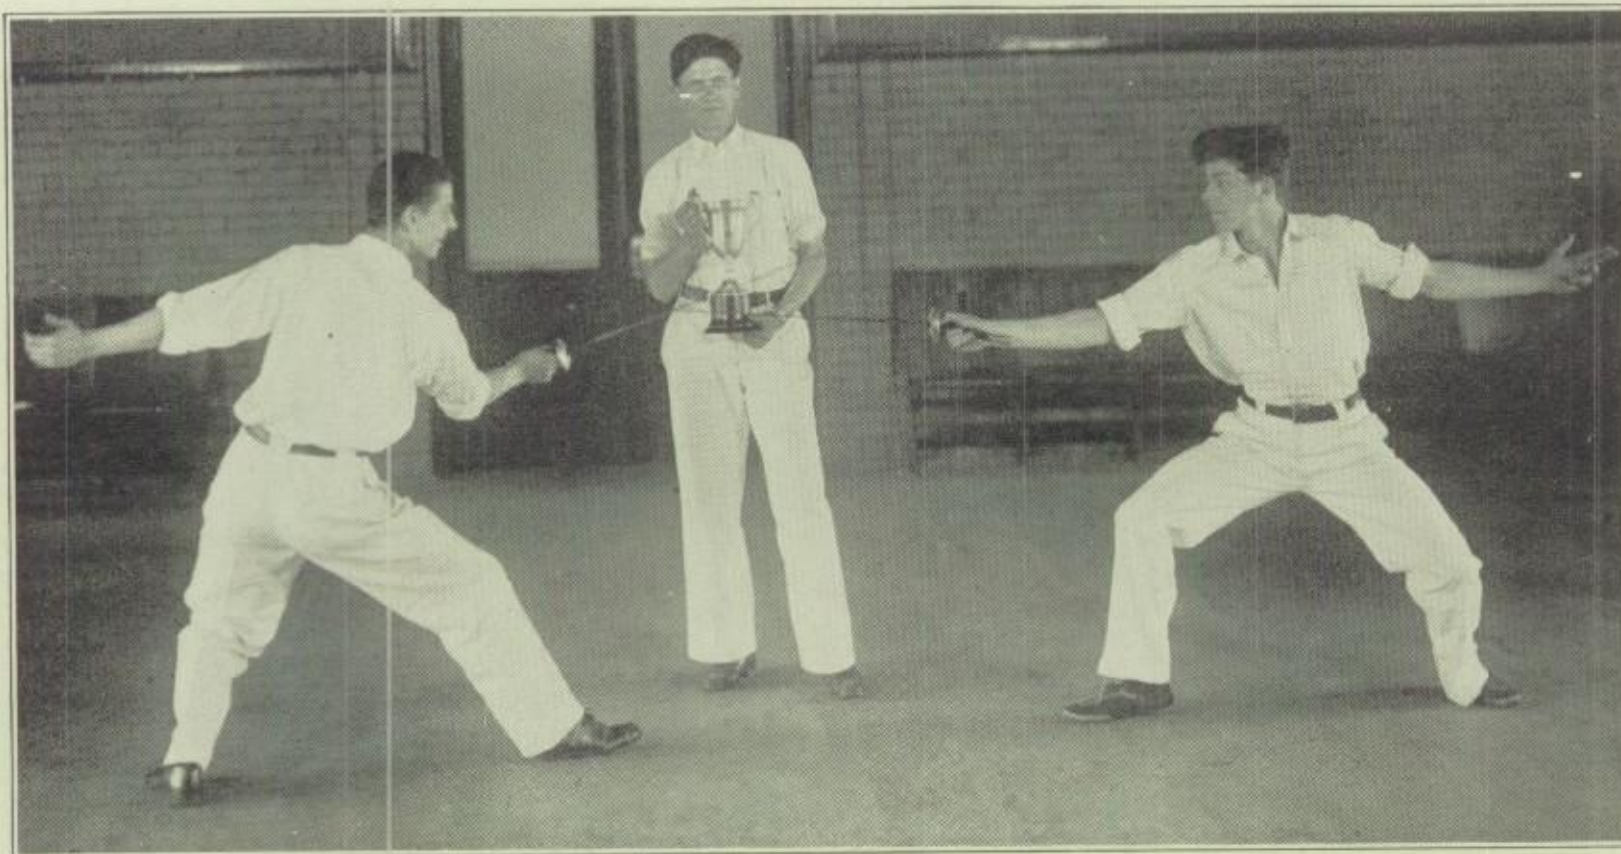

With Carl Vaicek on the mound, Waller's nine left the field baffled, while the Indians collected twenty hits from their hurlers. The first place holders of the north section exhibited their batting power by slamming out a team average of .480 for the Waller game.

"Bo" Lipski lead the rest with four hits out of five trips to the plate. Bergman and Hope each gathered three hits apiece. The sensational wallop of the game proved to be Masek's home run. It was a hard hit ball which dropped well behind the reach of the right fielder. Filichio, Baumgartner, and Czelusta are also responsible for the 17 to 1 victory over Waller.

LANE FALLS BEFORE SENN

For the first time this season Lane took a defeat on the chin which marred their column of losses and gave the Green and White nine from Senn something to brag about. In past years a Senn baseball team has not taken a game from Lane since 1920, and with the victory of this season the boys will throw their gloves in the trunk remarking of a good season. A victory over Lane is as good as a championship to other teams in the section.

The defeat, however, did not cause any damage because Lane already cinched the section crown by sweeping through with enough wins. About the only thing it will mean is a win for the record books for the Green and White nine up around the Rogers Park district.

State and Mid-West Champs in Action.

Fencers Win Second Trophy

Lane Fencers annexed another title and trophy to the long string of victories, by traveling over to Delafield, Wisconsin, and tying Senn for the title of Mid-West Champions. This Victory concludes the fencing season, one of the most successful in the history of Lane.

out twelve men. The Sheldon team made nine hits, one a double another a triple accompanied by four errors. The Seniors also made nine hits which included a home run by Lefty Penda, and only helped the Sophs with two errors. The final score was 6 to 4 which was a humble pie for the haughty seniors.

SHELDON TEAM WINS INTERROOM SCHOOL CHAMPIONSHIP

The senior Division 305 was defeated for the school championship by the Sophomores from Sheldon, S41. It proved to be a close game from the beginning and only for the two run handicap, the result might have been different.

Honeywinkle, the sophomore hurler, had the Seniors swinging for his fooling curves, striking

ARCHERS

Under the careful eye of Mr. Rogers the popularity of the Archery Club has risen in bounds. Already the Club has held several dual meets with other schools from which they emerged victoriously. The members of this organization are taught the sport from rock bottom as the bows and arrows which they use are made by themselves, in the spare moments.

ADAMS POWER STROKES

THE DOWNFALL OF YOUNG MICELI

Oh young Miceli came to Lane from the West.
Through all the wide Border his flivver was best;

And, save his good dog, other friends he had none,

He rode unafraid and he rode with great fun.
So faithful in lunch and so good in study,
There never was a boy like the young Miceli.

He stopped not for hot dogs, he stopped not for candy,

He swam the deep river where bridge wasn't any,

But ere he alighted at Adams school gate,
The tardy bell rang and the boy he was late,
So a discipline period in Room 303

Made lost and forlorn our young Miceli.

Rocco Lapetina

of soon leaving Adams. However, it is understood that they have since recovered their normal spirits.

When Ray Hindmarch got good
And started his studying
As all such boys should.

A guy I hate is Lapentina,
He always plays his concertina.
Wherever you go he there always moans
With listening people wanting stones.

—Herbert Oeser

When Jerry had no English
The teacher, she would say,
"The discipline room is calling.
You must be on your way."
He went, and went, and went, and went,
Returned to hear each day,

You must be on your way."

My Unfinished Story

my cousin. He lost no time in telling me, when others had advised me to go to high school, that "this education stuff is the bunk, and the best thing is to learn a trade." Well, I came under the influence of my brother-in-law, for I liked to visit at his house. He told me he didn't want to see me if I was satisfied to be a "dummy". He was a Lane graduate, and by September I had made up my mind and joined the fall procession to Sedgwick and Division streets.

My first days at Lane were strange and awesome, but by the second term I had got into the swing of things, and when I closed, I found the work fairly easy, and was rewarded with a scholarship medal. My second and third years were likewise successful, as has been my fourth, largely due to the influence of good teachers.

Such is the story of my life up to the present time. It is not a life of thrills, but it has been enjoyable to me. The memories of early childhood, the happy days and the playmates are things that shall live with me in pleasant memories all my life. As I live with fond parents, family and friends, I see how important they are in encouraging one to do things of greater importance and in helping to make real those dreams which we wish to come true, and to reach those heights we all strive to attain; and from out of this I sincerely hope that in the future I shall become, as I have so earnestly planned to be, a successful physician and surgeon.

I am sure he was one of the osseous type. How a person who is osseous hates to move around from place to place. This is the kind that hates to wear new clothes. They wear ties until vegetables start growing on the soup stains. Their heads are shaped like watermelons. I wouldn't want to be a guy of this type.

The last is the mental type. This is supposed to be the smartest of all types. A mental can tell you what's going to happen in a hundred years from now, but is always asking if he may borrow your pencil. The head of this type is shaped like an isosceles triangle. Their ears stick way out. I know a girl who is of this type and she has a hard job covering her ears. You ought to see the crop of hair she has on her head. This type likes to read books and they aren't fussy with their literature. See if you're this type.

Now authorities say that a person may be a combination. That is, he may be a vital thoracic type, a vital osseous type, osseous mental thoracic type, etc. No matter how good you are you can't have more than three types in you. If you have three of these types equally balanced you're more perfect than a guy who's unbalanced. Now that isn't what I'm saying. I am just telling you what I learned. Well, boys, see what type you are. I hope you aren't the type that I think you are.

Gigantic Contest Launched

Prompted by the success of the Camera Contest, we take pleasure in announcing a combination cross country ping pong and crossword puzzle contest open to our faculty. A handicap of two goals will be allowed those teachers who are in the habit of asking such questions as "Who Is What and When?" and "Why is Which, and How is What What?"

The contest Closes July 4th at sunset. Answers must be in handwriting, double-spaced, on neither side of No. 6 paper. All contributions exceeding 837.6 words must be bound in manila covers.

THE PRIZE—To all who solve this simple problem with an accuracy of two-thousandths of one per cent, we will give a year's subscription to the Tech Prep Annual, tied with a pink ribbon.

SPECIAL NOTICE—Mathematics teachers are not eligible for this prize, but if they wish to compete they stand a chance to win the hand-embroidered wheelbarrow.

PROBLEM—If there were about 100,000 Eskimos in the battle of Copenhagen and 10,000 were killed, and 10,000 hid in the weeds and the 326 remaining officers lined what was left up in 50 rows with the same number in each row; then if 301 officers died of diphtheria and 3,698 soldiers were shot at sunrise, and the remaining officers lined the rest up in 1,172 rows (with an equal number in each row); then exactly how many were there in the first place?

And now, dear teachers, commence. Here, buy 120 pencils and 60 pads of paper, quick.

A reformer is a person who doesn't want you to enjoy what he hasn't nerve to do.

The Horse-Before-The-Cart Idea

by Charles Schulze

The cart-before-the-horse principle of automobile power application which has been employed for years, now has a competitor, the horse-before-the-cart idea. That is the front-drive car has appeared whose power is applied to the front wheels, thereby pulling the automobile. It differs from other cars in that they are pushed by power that is applied to the rear axle. This new drive now appears in the Cord, manufactured by the Auburn Company.

The front-drive propulsion is not new since it goes back to the ox-cart and the chariot. The locomotive has always used it and the airplane uses nothing else.

The Cord both drives and steers through the front wheels and the engine, transmission, drive shaft, differential and driving axle all become a single unit of power.

The difficulty which manufacturers have met with was to design a universal joint which would permit these wheels to be steered at a sharp angle. As it is, the perfection of a universal joint which overcomes this has been designed by Auburn engineers, allowing the front wheels of the car to be steered at an angle of 42 degrees while in motion.

Abandon The Center Jump

Dear Editor:—

One of the evening newspapers stated recently that the college basketball coaches were in conference with the intention of abandoning the center jump as a tall center was too great a factor in determining the winner of the contest. In the same edition Ralph Cannon stated that a baseball team is only as strong as its pitching staff.

Therefore, Coaches, will you please tell us why it is that the pitchers are not discontinued from the great American game of baseball? Have the batter throw the ball in the air, counting strikes as usual. Why not make the game as complicated as football, changing the rules every year so that only the coach and the refs know what is going on, and the majority of the time even they don't. Meanwhile I am plugging for more understandable rules.
